'Everything We Need, Right Here'

When most people move to Ferris Hills at West Lake, it's their first experience with a retirement community.

For Mary Winants, it's the second. And also the best.

Mary has upstate New York roots but lived for approximately 40 years in central New Jersey, where her late husband taught at a prep school and they raised their four children. When it came time to consider a retirement community, she chose one in Pennsylvania, just over the Delaware River.

"I had lots of good friends there, but I was far away from all my children," said Mary, whose son works at Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva.

After arriving at Ferris Hills in 2016, Mary decided that this was a better fit. "I think it's a good size – you get to know everybody, and we've got everything we need, right here," she said.

Mary, who describes the chefs' food as "wonderful," signs up for outings to events and also enjoys walking her dog, Tasha, on Ferris Hills' scenic trails. She is currently creating a bird sanctuary on the grounds, for fellow residents who are also fond of the outdoors. She sees it as just one example of how when residents have suggestions or ideas, they're listened to.

"It's a very nice, warm feeling here," she said. "The staff go out of their way to be as friendly and accommodating as possible, and the residents are all very nice, too."
